Michael Starr Hopkins is one of the most astute political voices of his generation. After practicing law in New York, Hopkins followed his passion for politics. His work on both the Obama and Clinton campaigns were instrumental in his pivot. John Delaney named him Press Secretary for his presidential campaign in 2018.

Hopkins is unafraid to challenge the status quo, and it's evident in his role as contributing writer for major outlets such as The Huffington Post, The Hill, Politico, and Essence Magazine.

His political voice is well respected. Hopkins appears across network and cable outlets, offering balanced discourse. He covered the Trump impeachment hearings on MSNBC and has elevated political conversations on Fox News and CBS. His podcast, "The Starr Report" is an engaging listen with a wide range of guests.
